Is our special guest this morning

From Pastor Osteen:

Lou Ellen and I want to express our sincere thanks for your thoughtfulness and expression of love shown to us this Christmas. The cards and gifts were an encouragement to us and meant a lot. Thank you!

My frame was not hidden from you, when I was being made in secret, intricately woven in the depths of the earth.

Your eyes saw my unformed substance; in your book were written, every one of them, the days that were formed for me, when as yet there was none of them.

Created in His Image: Advocating for Life

BY ERLC RESEARCH TEAM- excerpt from our Life guide, “Created in the Image of God: A Practical Guide to Building a Culture of Life.”

scenario: A college student who is a pre-med major has a class assignment to take a position on whether abortion is “an essential part of reproductive healthcare.” Her classmates, none of whom agree with her pro-life convictions, all believe that it is, so she knows that she will be in the minority when she disagrees. She doesn’t believe that simply quoting Scripture will be enough to convince anyone of her position. What advice would you give her for her presentation?

While she should not shy away from her religious convictions in this presentation, the context of an academic pre-med setting should encourage her to lean into the plentiful scientific truths that support the pro-life position.

First, she should emphasize that abortion is not an essential part of reproductive healthcare because it does not seek to restore or heal, but rather to harm. From the moment of fertilization, a preborn child has completely unique genetic information which designates them as a separate human being with intrinsic worth, dignity, and a right to life. The milestones of fetal development demonstrate that preborn children are living, growing persons.

It is good to remind her that, while her faith may be the primary basis for her convictions regarding abortion, God has also given us natural revelation that can be observed through science. This evidence is convincing in its own right and can be effectively used to defend a pro-life position, especially in the context of an audience that does not submit to the teachings of Scripture.

Finally, she should address the use of the procedure in tragic circumstances to high-light how they are different. The use of the same procedures for treatment in marginal cases such as ectopic pregnancies is not a positive case for the vast majority of abortions. In those few cases, Christians can recognize the need for action to save the mother’s life, while not allowing abortion advocates to equate the two procedures as morally similar.
